Friends:

This weekend, we will take some time to celebrate, cherish, and reflect on conservation efforts to help protect our planet.

While Earth Day happens once a year, it's our everyday actions, and the habits we form, that clean the air we breathe, reduce greenhouse emissions, and preserve our planet for future generations.

Here in the 13th District, we are working together to improve our neighborhoods and protect our environment. In 2016 alone, we planted more than 200 trees and funded a Clean Team that clears gutters and storm drains of debris, keeping trash from entering the Los Angeles River and the ocean.

On the policy side, we took a stand on the controversial Dakota Access Pipeline, and we are looking at ways to divest taxpayer funds from banks that support projects that harm our environment and tribal lands. We are also establishing an Enhanced Infrastructure Financing District for the Los Angeles River, which will provide revenue to restore the natural environment.

We have so much to celebrate this Earth Day, and I hope you will join me this weekend at one of the following events across the the City:
